

BALBO AND PLANES
START VOYAGE HOME;
LEAVE JAMAICA BAY

General Takes Off First in An Overcast Sky and Brisk
Wind

WEATHER FAVORABLE

Planes Take Off in Groups of Threes Over Choppy
Waters

NEW YORK, July 25.—Bound for home and another mass flight across the ocean, the 24 seaplanes from distinct Italy took off from Floyd Bennett Airport for Shediac, New Brunswick, on the first stretch of the return voyage.

General Italo Balbo, his dress uniform of white changed to one of working blue, shot away from Jamaica Bay at 10 a. m., e. d. t. With clock-like precision, the other seaplanes followed his flag ship into the air. While the sky was overcast above the airport and a brisk wind was blowing, weather conditions to the North were reported as favorable. General Balbo had postponed his take-off yesterday due to fog along the route from Boston to New Brunswick.

In groups of three, the seaplanes skimmed like so many aerial skaters, over the choppy waters of Jamaica Bay and soared aloft. Each triad loafed lazily in the haze over the airport until the entire flying flotilla was in the air. The mass of planes then assumed its customary aerial formation in two sections of 12 ships each.
With 48 motors drumming forth a farwell song of the airways, the aéro-cade headed toward the North.

Woman and Son Attacked
In Croydon; Enroute Home

CROYDON, July 25.—A Croydon woman and her son were attacked while enroute from the Blue Moon hosiery mill to their Cedar avenue home last night, when two men leaped onto the running board of their machine and commenced using their fists.

The victims: Mrs. Norman Hughes, Sr., and Norman Hughes, Jr.

Mrs. Hughes was treated by a physician for cuts of the mouth, and also suffered from bruises, but was able to go to her employment this morning.

The affair occurred at State Road and Cedar avenue, when Mr. Hughes stopped to purchase a paper. It is said two of six men in another machine leaped to the Hughes automobile, and attempted to strike young Hughes. His mother it is said tried to assist him, and then the two men are alleged to have struck her. Mrs. Hughes and son recognized their assailants.

The two who were attacked and two women companions continued down Cedar avenue to their homes, being followed for a short distance by their attackers. Later Mrs. Hughes was taken to a physician for treatment.

Rudolph Ruby Has Pleasing Party, Birthday Anniversary

Rudolph Ruby, Cleveland street, spent a pleasant evening last night, when a party of friends gathered to assist in celebrating his birthday anniversary. Cards formed the chief pleasure, and later a repast was served.

Those attending the function: Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mitchell, and daughter, Thelma; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fennimore and daughter, Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sutton and daughter, Clara, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Conklin, Sr., Mrs. Mary Plank, Mr. and Mrs. Ruby and family, Mrs. Frank Paul and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Bowman, Mrs. Anna Robinson.
Winners of prizes were Mrs. Conklin, Mrs. Bowman, and Mr. Fennimore.

Stunt Night Staged When Women Are Guests of Men

The Brotherhood of Harriman M. E.
Church staged a ladies' night last evening in the church basement. The affair was in the form of a stunt social, with each attendant required to recite, sing or play a line.

The program: recitation, "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree," Arthur Pickering; match stunt, William Wilkinson; vocal selections, "My Ain" Folks," "Gypsy Sweetheart," John Orr; vocal number, "Moon Song," Mrs.
Roy Ott; recitations, Mrs. William Barnfield, Mrs. Walter Cooper, Russell Godshall, Mrs. William Borchers; vocal selection, "Mississippi," Leslie Rogers.

The Sunday School orchestra played during the evening and also gave a novelty selection.

Andrew Campbell, Robert Campbell, George and Herman Miles, Clifford Rogers and Albert Lynch gave a novelty number with Jew's harps, harmoniums and a wash board.

The committee in charge included: Lester Williams, chairman, with Fred Riebel, William Barr, Walter Cooper and Peter Peters.

Miss Dorothy Scott, 349 Barry Place, has returned from a two weeks' visit to relatives in New Brunswick, N. J.

100 IDLE MEN BACK AT WORK

Wilkes-Barre, July 25.—Idle for several months, 100 men were back at work today at the Salem Collieries Company mine at Schickshinny. An additional 100 workers will be employed by August 1st, officials said.

SEEK RELEASE ON KIDNAP CHARGE

Norristown, July 25.—The father of Mrs. Hilda McCrae Haslam, 28, one-time New York night club entertainer, accused of kidnapping her 7-year-old daughter Shirley, today planned to seek her freedom on a writ of Habeas Corpus in the county court here.

On the complaint of her divorced husband, Kenneth, a Cheltenham high school teacher, the woman was held without bail on a kidnapping charge at a hearing in Jenkintown. When the couple separated more than four years ago, the courts granted Haslam custody of the child. Last October the girl was spirited away from the school and after four months' search was located in New York.

PROBE FATAL ACCIDENT

Quakertown, July 25.—Police today were investigating the motor accident in which Fred W. Althouse, 38, a local insurance agent, was killed instantly on the Bethlehem Pike, near here, last night. Althouse's car crashed into the rear of a parked truck while Charles Foulke, the driver, was attempting to repair the engine.

HORACE ALLEN NEAR DEATH

Philadelphia, July 25.—Horace Allen, socially prominent retired wool merchant, who before a crowded court room in 1931 told of his daughter's betrayal by the man his son killed, lay near death today in the Germantown Hospital following a heart attack.

Allen's son, Eddie, who was acquitted of killing Francis Donaldson, 3d, scion of a prominent main line family, was at his father's bedside.

William, a second son, and Rose, who has found happiness in a new romance culminating in marriage on Saturday, waited their call to the hospital. Physicians said Allen probably would not live through the day.

signed as Judge of the Philadelphia Municipal Court to fight charges of the Board of Censors of the Philadelphia Bar Association, the Governor indicated today.

Industry's Wheels
Labor Into Action

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25.— America's dusty and creaking wheels of industry labored into action today following President Roosevelt's radio call to economic arms, heard last night by anxious millions.

Delivering the most momentous address since his inauguration the President held out a golden promise of lasting prosperity, but bluntly told the American people he could deliver the goods only with their help.

His speech came at a time when the giant wheels of his national recovery machinery were just beginning to turn. It was a supreme effort to accelerate their motion.

President Roosevelt spoke over a nation-wide radio hook-up and directed his words particularly to the Conference of Governors gathered in San Francisco and representing the people of these United States.

The foundation stones for prosperity have been hewn, the President declared. Courses for the future have been chartered. There must come now, to bring success and in return for rounded governmental leadership, an unstinting support of the national drive to raise farm prices and halt the creeping paralysis of unemployment.

Clearly, the executive explained, all that is possible to start this country moving toward better times has been done. He reviewed the work to that end accomplished to date since March 4th and found it good.

From now on, said President Roosevelt, it is up to the American people.

THEATRICAL REVUE TO BE AT DOYLESTOWN FAIR

Same Group Which Will Be Presented at Other Leading Fairs

UNUSUAL ATTRACTIONS

DOYLESTOWN, July 25.—No "new deals" are promised for the annual Doylestown Fair to be held September 26 to 30 inclusive—five days and six nights—but officials of the fair and department heads have completed arrangements for the most attractive fair in the history of the organization.

Dr. H. W. Turner, of New Hope, state veterinarian and president of the fair, speaking to a meeting of the officers and directors last night, said that a survey of the state indicates that the fairs that will prosper this year are those that produce the unusual.

"Fair patrons are through with the same old thing in the way of performances and stunts and this year in Doylestown we have booked for our free acts, the best obtainable in the country, in addition to a gorgeous theatrical revue of forty people," Dr. Turner announced.

The revue is the same that will be presented at the Lewistown, Reading, Allentown and York fairs this year, and was secured in Doylestown because of an open date between two of the engagements. It would have been impossible for Doylestown to have booked this revue in any other manner for it would necessitate an expenditure of $4500 a week. The revue will be presented each night on a large stage to be erected in front of the grandstand. An extra thousand seats will also be added to the grandstand.
The afternoon performances and free acts in front of the grandstand will be entirely different than the night performances.

Because of the fact that the revue has been booked, the American Legion drum and bugle corps contest night will be eliminated this year but will in all probability be held during the 1934 fair. The various service clubs of Bucks county will be the guests of the fair officials on Monday night of fair week when they will see the first performance of the flashing revue.

The premium lists for the 1933 fair are being prepared now. The list will be published in a few weeks. Premiums have been reduced slightly, in keeping with the policy of economy that has been established by the fair this year.

Department heads of the cattle, hog, dog, farm produce, Grange, poultry and women's shows last night reported that interest is keen this year.
Throughout Bucks county, they report, people are planning to exhibit at Doylestown for the honor that goes with winning "a Doylestown ribbon" or cash prize, indicative of reward where competition is keen.

Although it is not planned to have as large a show entered by the Philadelphia Rabbit and Cavié Breeders' Association this year, it was announced that the show will be about three-fourths as large as last year's record entry list but that the class of entries will be higher class. This is the largest and most important show in the East among the breeders.

There will be a fine harness racing program starting Tuesday afternoon.
An application has been made for space by the Bucks County Goat Breeders' Association, and the directors have offered premiums in three classes for a goat show.

FIREMEN TO MEET

There will be a meeting of the Bristol Consolidated Fire Department tonight in the assembly room, Municipal business will be transacted and all members are urged to attend.

CLOSING EXERCISES

The public is asked to attend the closing exercises of the Daily Vacation Bible School at the Presbyterian Church of Our Saviour, Wood street and Lincoln avenue, this evening.
Program will start at 8.15.

PROPOSE EXCHANGE CONTROL

Washington, D. C., July 25.—A threefold program for control of price fluctuations in the New York Stock Exchange was proposed today by Senator Steiwer, Republican of Oregon, after demanding an immediate inquiry into the cause of the recent collapse in market values. Steiwer asked legislative, administration and business leaders to study his reform program which he will sponsor at the next session of Congress.

BRIDE-TO-BE LOSES HER COURAGE WHILE WAITING

Hears Troubles of Another Couple Aired in Office of Justice

WEPT DURING NUPTIALS

MORRISVILLE, July 25.—Although Soreen H. Hanessian, 29, Philadelphia, never expects to be married again, he has this advice to offer to all prospective bridegrooms:

Don't get married before a Justice of the Peace while the squire is hearing a domestic relations case.

Hanessian made the mistake of doing just such a thing and it almost resulted in his not having a bride.

And of all the marriages Justice Neal Nolan, this place, has performed, that of Hanessian and the girl who is now his wife, was perhaps the most unusual of them all. During the entire ceremony, the bride wept bitterly.

It all began when Hanessian and Miss Christine Mead, 29, also of Philadelphia, arrived at Squire Nolan's court to be united in the holy and legal bonds of matrimony. But it so happened that Joseph Szentes, of Lenora avenue, this borough, got there first.

Not that Mr. Szentes wanted to be there. He didn't have any choice in the matter. His wife hailed him before the court on a charge of disorderly conduct.

As they unfolded their troubles to Mr. Nolan, the prospective bride and bridegroom too seats at the rear of the court to wait for the time when their ceremony should be performed.

First Mrs. Szentes said that her family was receiving relief from the borough. Then she said her husband sold their automobile for $100 and spent half of it on drink. Finally she told how her husband came home drunk and abused her terribly.

Miss Mead was quite composed up to the time that Mrs. Szentes told about the abuse which she endured.
Then the bride-to-be began to shed tears. As the case went on she shed more tears and as Squire Nolan, interrupted in his deliberations by the prolonged sniffing and wailing, sentenced Mr. Szentes to 15 days in the county jail. Miss Mead was weeping more bitterly than ever.

Squire Nolan is accustomed to strange things happening. But he was not quite prepared for what occurred next. Miss Mead announced that she did not care to go through with the marriage ceremony.

Why get married when this—she pointed to Mr. Szentes who was departing in the custody of a constable —was the way it ended? She went into conference with her intended husband and finally upon his assurance that their married life would be only the ideal one, she consented to take the marriage vows.

But as Squire Nolan read the service, tears flowed from the dark eyes of the bride, and they continued to flow as the newly-married couple departed.

GATHER DATA FOR PROBE

New York City, July 25.—In preparation for a Senatorial investigation of practices of the New York Stock Exchange, aids of Ferdinand Pecora, special counsel to the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, have been directed to examine books and records of several New York brokerage houses, it was learned today. The examination will be undertaken, Pecora said, in the belief it may reveal the cause of speculation waves and suggest methods of controlling them.

Pay Visit To Young Men
At New Germantown Camp

CROYDON, July 25.—Mr. and Mrs.
Nicholas DiNunzio, and Mrs. Daniel Leary, Croydon; Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Lippincott, Frankford; Mr. and Mrs.
John Urdike and Miss Rose Baker, Tullytown; participated in a trip Sunday to Camp 1113, New Germantown, to visit young men of this section who are engaged there.

The party was shown the excellent camp, and admired the attractive and well-arranged streets, the new mess hall which is nearing completion, etc.
The young men will soon enjoy a swimming pool which is rapidly approaching a completed stage. All voiced pleasure over their camp life and work.

Dinner was served the visitors in a tent provided for the occasion.

KEATING'S HOME RUN
LEADS TO TEAM'S VICTORY

Jefferson A. C. Rallies and Wins by One Run

DEFEATING DAMP WASH

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Schedule for Tonight
A. O. H. at Damp Wash
(St. Ann's Field)

Led by a home run from the bat of Paul Keating, the Jefferson A. C. rallied in the closing session last night on St. Ann's field to hand a close defeat to the Damp Wash A. A. Final count was 6-5.

Keating's circuit crash came in the fourth inning and found two men resting on the sacks at the time. In the next inning, the Mules shoved across two more tallies and victory was theirs.

"Reds" McCurry was the winning hurler and he pitched a brilliant ball game. He limited the Washers to four hits and only two of these were clean.
He was a trifle wild and issued five passes. All the laundrymen's scoring came in the second and third innings.

Up until the fourth frame, "Reds" Devine was pitching in fine style. He had given the Jeffs only one measly hit but had issued three passes which enabled the Jefferson club to score a tally in the second.

In the fourth, Devine went to pieces.
McCafferty hit to right but went out trying to steal. Tomlinson fanned. E.
Keating hit to Cochrane and Dries dropped the low throw at first. Mc-Curry singled past Devine and Keating raced to third. Paul Keating socked his homer at this stage of the game and the Jefferson team was but one run behind. Devine hit Britton with a pitched ball and Tulio lined a hit to right. Wright forced Tulio to end the inning.

In the next inning with one out, Mc-Clafferty beat out a hit to third. Devine then passed Tomlinson and E.
Keating was replaced by Leigh.

ATTACK ANDALUSIA MAN
RETURNING FROM WORK

Fred Vandegrift Knocked Down and Beaten on Bristol Pike

MAY KNOW ATTACKERS

ANDALUSIA, July 25.—A well-known resident here was knocked down and beaten on the Bristol Pike late yesterday afternoon while returning from his employment at the Blue Moon hosiery mill, Croydon.

The victim: Fred Vandegrift, Bristol Pike.

Vandegrift, together with a group of employees of the Blue Moon company, was riding in the company's truck, enroute home. When Vandegrift alighted from the vehicle in front of the post office, here, he was attacked by some of the five men riding in a machine just behind the truck, it is stated. After being knocked to the ground, Vandegrift was painfully beaten.

Vandegrift believes he can identify some of his attackers.

The affair was reported to state police.

MOTORIZING THE ARMY

Following the Navy Department's plan for utilizing a portion of the public works fund for building America's fleet up to treaty strength, comes a proposal that part of the same fund be used for improving the efficiency of the army by motorizing this branch of national defense.

The War Department's program would cost about $50,000,000. It would provide for complete motorization of cavalry and infantry machine gun units. The fact that carrying out of the plan would provide additional employment would bring the project within the scope of the public works measure, officials assert. In support of this, they point out that construction of one three-ton truck requires "265 man days," or 265 men one full day. A large number of trucks would be required in carrying out the plan. Other motor vehicles besides trucks would be needed. The motor, steel and allied industries would be benefited.

The proposal calls for no increase in the standing army. The charge of militarism cannot be made against it. It would mean simply that the efficiency and mobility of the army at its present strength would be greatly increased. Such a consideration is an important one in relation solely to the army. The fact that it would stimulate a wide section of industry and increase employment through the winter months gives it additional worth.

The plan deserves serious consideration by officials. Some of the leading members of the Senate and the house appropriation committees are said to favor the proposal. No valid objections yet have been made.

NEW PACT SIGNED

Now, let's see if Europe will breathe any easier. The four-power pact designed to guarantee peace among European powers for 10 years has been signed. Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany are the signatories.

There is no doubt that if these powers live up to the obligations imposed upon them by the treaty, the cause of European peace will be greatly advanced. There is no reason to question the sincerity of any one of them in signing the new pact. Neither Britain, France nor Italy has shown any disposition to violate its pledged word. While Hitlerized Germany has not been as firm as it might have been toward some of its obligations, its good faith should not be doubted in advance.

These four powers, however, have many conflicting interests, and nationalism runs strong in all of them. The fact that international treaties in recent years have been treated lightly, and in some cases flagrantly violated, by some of the signatories has served to weaken public confidence in treaties, to a certain extent.

The world, nevertheless, will look hopefully to the four-power pact. In purpose it represents an important advance for peace in Europe. Whether it will achieve its purpose, well may be left to the future.

Mr. Broughton, militant fighter against prohibition, had in mind substitution so that Anti-Saloon League would have to search for new target.

SYNOPSIS

Attending the premiere of her latest motion picture, beautiful Leni Lueska, the star, is confronted by a shabby, emaciated man, who emerges from the crowd crying, "Leni! It is I, Karl Kruger. Do you want me to tell the whole world?" Leni turns white. She tells the man she will talk with him inside. Lucky Cavanaugh, a gambler, fascinated by Leni's beauty, saunters into the theatre after Kruger. He prevents Kruger from making a scene and has him placed in a private office until after the show. Cavanaugh then bribes an usher to seat him in Leni's box. During the performance Douglas Gates, Leni's elderly escort, proposes to her. She is tempted to accept him to get away from everything. In the office next to Kruger's, thieves are robbing the safe. Leni leaves her box and goes to Kruger. He taunts her with, "It is not pleasant to have a starving bum hanging around—not when he happens to be your husband!" He wants recognition as Leni's husband and all that goes with it. She refuses but he says he will wait for her to think it over. Back in the box, Leni is driven to tears. In the darkness Cavanaugh clasps one of her hands to comfort her. There is something consoling and strengthening in the touch of this stranger. He suggests that Leni go out for some air and she consents.

CHAPTER SIX

"I think I like you because you do not look so respectable as the rest."

"I've tried all my life not to be respectable," he said easily. A golden warmth emanating from her body subtly starved the blood singing in his veins.

"You are different," she informed him, her eyes steadily upon his face. "The others—they try so hard to act respectable . . . in public. They make a profession of it. But you—"

"And you—"

"I am not a human being," said Leni. "I am just fireworks. A sky-rocket, perhaps. I have to keep burning myself up to keep going higher. There is nothing left—all is consumed. I will come down faster than I went up."

Cavanaugh patted her hand. "Nonsense! You're still feeling a little tragic."

While he talked and listened to her answers, Cavanaugh's mind was seeking an escape for Leni and himself from the stale-smelling slot between the two buildings. It was a place for ash cans and janitors and prowling cats.

A glistering princess in silver slippers was parading in a gutter . . .

"You stand right here a minute," he said excusing himself and walking ahead of her toward the cigarette smoker in the usher's uniform that lounged close to the side door.

Somewhere in the crowded theater there must be a comfortable spot of privacy which two people could visit for a half hour. Any usher, properly oiled, would know.

"Hello, Mr. Cavanaugh," said the uniformed man speaking in a voice like a rusty blade. His cigarette remained between his lips. "Nice evening, ain't it?"

Laughter sprang to Cavanaugh's eyes, exploded with a muffled sound in his throat. The ridiculous fact was that the man was not an usher at all, but a slit-mouthed hoodlum whose native ferocity was grotesquely wrapped up in candy-soldier epaulettes and brass buttons . . . a gentleman who bore the richly-earned nickname of Slug.

To be discovered in the ridiculous ivory of honest work, by a personage of Lucky Cavanaugh's prestige in the upper-underworld, brought a scorch of humiliation to the bluish cheek of the masquerader and left him feeling exactly as a tiger might feel if compelled to wear a pink ribbon around its neck.

After all, a man has his pride, even if his name is Slug and he stands ready for murder on instant notice.

Not for an instant did Lucky Cavanaugh suspect Slug of being an usher. There was only one explanation and he stated it.

"I suppose you're here to soup up the joint."

Slug did not deny the opinion. "Well, you know how them things go," he remarked. "All the boys are doing the best they can these days."

Nobody knows much about the mystic relations of "the boys." Not even the boys themselves.

Certain men are born with that in their blood which sets them apart. Anybody else is an outsider. They are a secret race, comparatively few in number, extending from coast to coast and speaking their own private language. Of few criminals can it be said that he is one of the boys. But most of the boys are criminals of one sort or another, though some are actors and pugilists and gamblers. They do not yell copper and they don't eat on one another.

They are regrettable blots upon our civilization. Nevertheless, they are with us. Lucky Cavanaugh was not an outsider.

"If I was you," said Slug, "I'd wheel that dame out of the way."

"Don't worry—I'm not going to stumble into your play," said Cavanaugh, "but if you've eased the joint you probably know every mousehole in it. The girl is feeling faint and I want to get her out of the mob for a half hour. Some place private."

Slug thought a moment, his face impassive. Then he took a short piece of steel from under his jacket. "Slip this in your pocket 'cause you'll have to jimmy a window. Mr. Cavanaugh. You go up the steps back of the balcony and keep going. They corkscrew at the top and you come out on the roof. There's a penthouse that belongs to the manager. He keeps it locked till after the show every night."

"Thanks," said Cavanaugh. "Don't mention it," responded Slug. "I been in the same fix myself, lots of times."

It gave Cavanaugh a mood of sureness to feel the uncomplicated obedience of Leni to his guidance as they moved like shadows up the hidden stairway that twisted narrowly to the roof. No petty arguments, questions and objections from the bright good creature. The kind of a woman to make a man feel taller than he really was . . .

They had passed the closed office where Karl Kruger sat in a leather chair fighting with his own erratic nerves, while the two silent burglars in the room next door looked at an illuminated watch dial in the darkness and counted the fateful minutes.

In the box downstairs, Douglas Gates was still dozing, unaware of Leni's absence.

From the silvered screen Leni Lueska distributed her voice and looks and personality among four thousand cash customers. Up on the roof, Lucky Cavanaugh deftly broke the lock of a French window and stood aside for Leni to enter. His manner was that of a princely host.

The room was revealed in a soft yellow light as he found a button on the wall. Low modernistic furniture, a sleepy Buddha, celebrities photographed in silver frames . . . a gentleman who bore the richly-earned nickname of Slug.

To be discovered in the ridiculous ivory of honest work, by a personage of Lucky Cavanaugh's prestige in the upper-underworld, have brought me up a lot of stairs, but are we any nearer heaven?"

"Give me a little more time and I'll see what I can do," said Cavanaugh lightly.

He kept his eyes fixed upon her unhappy face as he relaxed himself into a chair in front of her. It was difficult to sympathize with her troubles—first, because she seemed saturated with that peculiar shell of prosperity and self-confidence that encases the famously successful. Secondly, he was wondering how long it would be before they kissed.

The thought flashed across his mind—not as a bold speculation—but as a fact about to occur. It was a hunch—a definite message upon a mysterious telepathic wave length.

"I think," said Leni slowly, "that I am going to tell you something." Cavanaugh waited for her to continue but she fell into an abstraction of silence. Her legs were crossed and she sat staring at the tip of her silver evening slipper. Light from the table lamp surrounded her blonde head like a sheen of yellow moonlight.

"Where did you come from?" she asked him suddenly.

"From Caliente this afternoon—"

"No, not A million people might have come out of Caliente. But you—where did you come from to drop into my life this night—tonight of all nights? When I first saw you I was looking back over my left shoulder. You were just another man—meaning nothing. Even now I do not know your name."

"Cavanaugh, Lucky, for a nickname."

"Cavanaugh the Lucky," repeated Leni, voicing it gravely. "It sounds like the title of some medieval king. It doesn't matter. You are you, whether you came from Caliente—or dropped out of the sky. If you really have any luck I shall need it all tonight. Perhaps that is why you were sent to me—to bring me luck."

"It's all yours," he assured her. "That remains to be seen," she said, without looking at him. "I do not know why I am going to tell you—all this. All I know is that I must tell someone—that I've got to find help—some place—"

Cavanaugh, out of politeness, did not look at her eyes, did not see them begin to swim with tears which she managed to control before they dropped into the open palms of her hands, resting in her lap. They were the most beautiful hands he had ever seen—hands as helpless as two white flowers.

After a time, Leni Lueska began to speak.

She spared herself nothing. It was as impersonal as though she had been telling the story of another woman. Her life flowed past like a swift dark stream.

A factory in Vienna. Two hundred girls—children—making artificial flowers in a sunless room. Twelve hours a day. Black bread and watery lentil soup. Fingers stained with aniline dyes. Shoes with paper in the soles. Starved minds, starved youth. The maddening roar of machinery in the lint-filled air.

Karl Kruger. Eserpe. Wine. Marriage. Beatings. Hatred. Theft. Flight. Arrest. Escape. Terror. Wine. Beatings. Hysteria. Starvation. Collapse of body and mind. Men. Berlin. Men. London. Kruger. Prison . . . America . . .

Out of the ashes rose the woman. Waitress. Salesgirl. Night school. Mannequin. English classes. Savings account. A stock company in Portland, Me. The long trip to Hollywood. Incredible ambition and iron-bound determination. Success . . . Stardom . . .

Her voice broke, ended sharply . . . (To Be Continued)

Post's Amazing Record May Stand for Years

Post's Round the World Route

Wiley Post's remarkable solo flight around the world in 7 days, 18 hours and 49 minutes, established a record that, in the opinion of aviation experts, will take years to beat. Here is how Post's record compares with other marks:

Ferdinand Magellan, 1519-22—by sailing vessel, 2 years, 11 months and 23 days.

Nellie Bly, 1889—by steamship and train, 72 days, 6 hours and 11 minutes.

John Henry Mears, 1913—steamship and train, 35 days, 21 hours.

Linton Wells and Edward Evans, 1929—by steamship, auto, airplane and train, 28 days, 14 hours, 6 minutes.

Mears and C. B. D. Collyer, 1928—by steamship and airplane, 23 days, 15 hours and 21 minutes.

Dirigible Graf Zeppelin, 1929-31—by air, 7 hours, 34 minutes.

Post and Gatty, 1931—by airplane, 8 days, 15 hours and 49 minutes.

Post's Record May Stand for Years

By KING B. CLARK
International Illustrated News Staff Writer

NEW YORK, . . . —Aviation authorities are confident that Wiley Post's round-the-world record will stand for a year or more.

The season for transoceanic flying is almost over, as weather conditions will steadily become worse until Spring; no other globe-circling flight is in course of preparation at this time; and backers for air exploits are few and far between.

In the two years that the record Post jointly held with Harold Gatty stood, it was challenged but once, and the attempt by Jimmy Mattern ended dismally in Russia, where the Mattern-Griffin flight had come to grief a year before.

There is no possible way of breaking the record, without flying all the way, and virtually continuously. It is doubted if a pilot flying alone could better Post's record by more than a few hours, even with a faster plane, for Post pushed human powers to the limit to get along with only a few hours' rest during the seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes he was flying from New York to New York.

It took months of physical training for Post to be able to lower the 1931 mark he made with Gatty by 21 hours and two minutes, and no solo aspirant for the round-the-world speed crown could hope to succeed without similar lengthy preparation. In flying alone, Post was able to use the space that would have been occupied by a companion with gas, and his larger fuel supply and lighter load when the gas was low enabled him to make longer hops than when he was accompanied by Gatty. There is doubt if a plane with two pilots alternating at the controls would have a better chance of lowering the mark than a lone flier.

Until Post and Gatty set the record of eight days, 15 hours and 51 minutes in 1931, round-the-world record-setters traveled in comparative comfort. The numerous passengers on the Graf Zeppelin when it went from New York to New York in 21 days, 7 hours and 34 minutes, the record broken by Post and Gatty, had plenty of sleep, hot food cooked aboard, abundant opportunity to enjoy the scenery.

The first globe-trotters were the men of Ferdinand Magellan's ship, which completed a westward trip from Portugal back home in two years, 11 months, 23 days. This trip was more or less an accident, and could have been made in much faster time, even with the sailing vessels Magellan used.

Edward E. Evans, a Detroit, and Linton Wells, a newspaperman, went after the Mears mark in 1926, and lowered it to 28 and a half days. They used planes across Europe, Asia and the United States. Two years later, Mears, flying with Capt. C. B. D. Collyer, won the honor back again, cutting the elapsed time between New York and New York to 23 days, 15 hours. They covered more territory in planes than Evans and Wells, and plane speed had stepped up. That mark for ringing the world stood until the Graf Zeppelin's flight.

When the Post mark is broken, aviation authorities believe it will be done in a plane refueled in the air.

MISS R. ARMSTRONG GIVES SOLUTION FOR HOSIERY PROBLEMS

DOYLESTOWN, July 25.—Hosiery problems can be solved by the use of a few standard aids, explains Miss Rhonda A. Armstrong, home economics extension representative. More thought in buying makes the problem easier. Points to consider are fit, wear, looks and cost.

Miss Armstrong offers the following suggestions: (1) Buy stockings a trifle longer than the foot. They will wear longer and will be more comfortable; (2) It is economical to buy two pairs of the same color and weight at one time. If one stocking is ruined by a runner it still can be mended; (3) Buy stockings of the right leg length. There are three different lengths in one box; (4) Get neutral shades. The same stockings then will look well with any dress; (5) Stockings should be washed after each wearing. Perspiration destroys the fabric, and if the feet are at all tender discomfort results.

There are three types of hose on the market—full fashioned, seamless, and mock seam, Miss Armstrong explains. The full fashioned stocking will always fit better than other stockings of the same material because it is shaped at both ankle and foot by narrowing just as our home knitted stockings were shaped. It is, however, the most expensive because it requires more skilled labor and because it requires two machines in its manufacture instead of one.

In contrast with the full fashioned stocking is the seamless one. This is knit in the form of a tube without seams. It does not fit well around the ankle or the toes. It is, however, the cheapest of all the types.

Between these two types is the mock seam stocking. This is made to look somewhat like the full-fashioned one but it does not fit quite as well. The cost is medium.

Luckies Please!

Now my fiance and I both smoke Luckies

It wasn't always so. In the beginning I tried his brand, and I got him to try mine. Well, he liked mine...but not for the same reason that I say "Luckies Please". He said Luckies taste fine and they're ever so mild. But I'm a woman and I pride myself on my sense of daintiness—for, my cigarette does touch my lips and is a personal, intimate thing with me. Naturally "Toasting" means to me even more than it does to a man, for purity is something that a fastidious woman appreciates highly.

because "It's toasted"
